The New "Varsity" Style Eye-Glasses

The New
"VARSITY"
GLASSES
Open and Closed

Are Especially Noticeable Because of the Large Size of the Lenses

This is the one great advantage which they have over ordinary eye glasses—
the extra size of the lenses makes reading with them easier on the eyes—the larger lens giving a wider vision.
Then, too, the long, flexible spring lets them grip the nose gently, but none the less firmly, enabling one to continue reading for extended periods without either tiring the eyes or hurting the nose.

The Fountain Pen We Illustrate is the Latest Model Issued by the Waterman Company

It is a combination safety pen and self-filler, that can be carried in any position and, of course, conveniently filled. It is a particularly good one for the varied work and activities of the student, not only of service during lectures but also not liable to leak or "get inky" should its owner be mixed in a scuffle in the halls or on the campus. The price is $2.50.

A Sterling Silver Pencil As a Christmas Gift

The pencil shown has a patent sharpeners that screws on to the end
—it is shown at the top of the pencil illustrated—thus enabling you to keep the lead always in good condition for writing. The price is $1.80.

Dedication

In dedicating their Graduating Number to

Dr. Eber Crummy

the students of Wesley College desire to express their affectionate regard and whole-hearted esteem to the big man who has come into their lives ; and whose spirit, it is hoped, will be re-incarnated by them, in the years to come, upon the broad prairies and seacoasts of our Western world. :: :: :: ::

A Valedictory Message

THE academic year just closed has been a memorable one in the annals of Wesley College. Events of unusual importance in the development of the College have contributed to this. There have been other contributions, however, of even greater influence. The spirit of sacrifice has been in the air. When College opened in September already hundreds of our students and ex-students were in the trenches or on their way to the front, and during the year hundreds more left the College halls or their work elsewhere to contribute their share to the struggle of the Empire. Their loyalty and devotion to duty has touched us all with a breath of outlook and a conception of duty as the crown of living, of which before we were incapable. I think I can say, as a consequence, a seriousness of purpose and a spirit of devotion to truth and duty, perhaps never before equalled, has marked the College work and life of the year. And perhaps I could say nothing which will better enable our noble men in the front to see that their splendid conduct has already begun to bear fruit. I am of the opinion also that in what I have reported of the College life of the year there is the suggestion that the sacrifice of today is bringing in a new day, which every true student and servant of man will be glad to see.

May I tell our Wesley boys in arms how proud their teachers and comrades are of them, and may I assure the fathers and mothers and friends of those who have gloriously fallen, that every member of the staff and of the graduate and student body joins them in their feeling of noble pride, as we think with them of their fallen heroes, faithful unto death, and in the deepest sympathy and sorrow as we remember with them the irreparable loss which the gift of their best to humanity's weal has entailed upon them.

A Brief History of 1915-16 at Wesley College

In as much as I was aware that no one would assume that the sketch to follow pretends to be exhaustive, I consented to put on paper a few words concerning the academic year that has now come to its close.

Probably the most important single event in the life of the institution took place about a year ago, when the momentous decision to offer the Principalship to Rev. Dr. Crummy was made, and was accompanied by what we all regard as a most felicitous consequence. Dr. Crummy has, however, heard the truth about himself so often that I shall not say anything more on this subject.

The Arts course of the college having risen like a phoenix out of its own ashes, the staff of the college was augmented by the addition of two professors (to preside over the two recently established departments of History and Political Economy), and by three lecturers (in English, Mathematics and Classics), these all have, since their elaborate inaugural, entered in varying degree into the life of the college.

It cannot be denied, even by the most rabid advocate of the factory type of a university, that Wesley College has, in this first year of its new era, justified (if, indeed, any justification is necessary) its right to teach arts. Nowhere has the student body led a more vigorous and healthy existence or been more keenly alive to the rights and duties of undergraduates; nowhere more loyal to its college and to its instructors (who themselves have shown a worthy example of loyalty and service, and who, through their very diversity, claim to realize a high type of unity); nowhere, if all is considered, has a student body reaped fairer rewards. It is unnecessary to catalogue here the doings of the various college societies, the social and literary functions, the athletic competitions, the gratifying returns of University examinations, with their list of medals and Scholarships, etc., to establish the truth of the above contention.

The last sentence bears with it the implication that the student body has been making its full contribution to the life of our local university, and such indeed has been the case. That the staff and students of what may be called University College recognize this may be confidently believed, despite the effort of one of its instructors to create controversy and the equally abortive attempts at disturbance on the part of the editors of "The Manitoban," who seem to have taken Hearst or Bottomley for their journalistic ideal.

It is, however, chiefly this participation in the affairs of the country at large that give the students of Wesley College the greatest cause for self-congratulations. The prosecution of the present war has, of course, been the chief public concern during the past year. In this momentous struggle the student body has been playing its full part. Of the number enrolled last fall, over a hundred have enlisted for active service, and over two hundred other young men who received their training at the college have enlisted for overseas service. Some of these have given their lives for their country—sint animae nostrae cum illis!—and it is remarkable that in this noble number there appears first and foremost the name of Wm. Crummy (the eldest son of our principal), who, as a student of Wesley College, had won for his Alma Mater and himself such honors as fall to only the most successful undergraduates to gain, and who, by his heroic death, has attained to a place of distinction whereof only a few can even dream. Others have been wounded, and a third group is pressing onward, eager for the performance of duty. The staff of the college, moreover, has, in spite of its comparatively small number, made three contributions to the complement of officers for overseas forces. In addition, it has throughout the year given the military authorities all possible assistance by way of throwing open the college buildings for military lectures, etc., and their grounds for military work of a practical nature.

Throughout the year, the college and its work have been before the public of the Western Provinces to a degree unique in the history of the institution. The Principal and many of the instructors have been fortunate enough to get personally into touch with almost all the chief centres and many of the smaller prairie places. For their valuable educational work not only the supporters of Wesley College but all who are concerned about higher educational training may well feel duly grateful.

Definite extension work was done by one department of the college, viz., that of History, and this first attempt has met with a welcome that warrants the practicability and value of such efforts.

A departure in college administration is coming into effect this year, whereby the actual carrying out of the business of the institution will be entrusted, to a greater degree, to the people of Manitoba and of the neighboring provinces. This change, which is quite in accord with the democratic spirit of the college, is brought about by giving graduates of the college an opportunity to elect a certain number of themselves to the College Board. Furthermore, certain other changes in administration are contemplated, whereby certain anomalies (that need not be discussed here) will be done away with.

Although the college has, like so many other public institutions, suffered inestimable loss as a result of the present world-madness of war, its administrators and students join in regarding that, despite giant difficulties, a great deal of valuable and enduring work has been carried out during the year that has passed.

S. J.

The congratulations of Vox are extended to Dr. G. Ferguson, '09, on his marriage to Miss Helen Ross.

Best wishes to both, George!

Y. W. C. A.

The inaugural event in Y. W. activities was the reception, where the new students were warmly welcomed and the aims of the association and its plans for the year were outlined.

The general meetings have been of particular interest. Perhaps the most pertinent and engrossing theme, in view of our newly-acquired responsibilities was citizenship—which Dr. Myers, of Toronto, made the subject of an address.

The spirit of sacrifice prevails in our midst. It is noticeable that it finds its expression in service. Our Social Service department has been the most flourishing in the organization. The girls have learned conditions by personal contact and have “done their bit” to brighten and uplift.

Study classes are also an integral factor in Y. W. C. A. work, which aims at symmetry—the all-round girl. Bible study groups were conducted under able leadership, and a series of missionary lectures was given by Dr. Patterson on “The Orient Peoples and Their Problems.”

The “sinews of war” must ever be forthcoming. Systematic giving has raised about $75 for mission work among the Japanese girls. Our Field Day luncheon has become an institution, and owing to the hearty patronage accorded it, a fruitful source of income. This money is the basis for the Summer Conference fund to defray the expenses of our delegates. A pennant sale last fall and a sale of candy at the University play further increased the amount. The older members had pledged themselves to earn a dollar during the summer. Varied and amusing were the experiences recounted of how that dollar grew.

One of the special events of the year was the joint Y. M. and Y. W. Missionary Conference. Speakers and student leaders brought inspiring messages. The underlying theme—To go or send—was not new, but “in times like these” it acquires a deeper significance.

“Still achieving, still pursuing,” may be said of our workers, and tribute is due to our president, Katherine Greenbank, for her untiring efforts and tactful leadership. She is known and loved by all the girls.

At the very opening of the fall term, when plans were being discussed for work along Red Cross lines, it was wisely suggested that the women students should have the chance of looking at the subject from the broader view-point and learn just how great their responsibilities and opportunities were becoming in a rapidly widening sphere of influence. In co-operation with other colleges, a mass meeting of all the women students was held, after which the Wesley girls met for the purpose of organization. The following executive was appointed:

President, Mrs. Crummy; sec.-treas., Miss Jo Hinrikson; working committee, Mrs. Melvin, Mrs. Hiebert, Mrs. Rose, Miss Florence Humble, and Miss Muriel Anderson. We have met in the reading room every Tuesday afternoon, and much has been accomplished. The work was both varied and interesting, and our Red Cross headquarters was always a pleasant place in which to meet. Mrs. Loftus sat enthroned at the sewing machine, and the work she did filled most of us with mighty awe. Mrs. Moody “examined” and “packed,” and saw that our work came up to the highest requirements, while Mrs. Crummy—well, she was everywhere, doing everything, helping everyone. She was always prompt and faithful in her attendance, and her sympathy and devotion to duty—or pleasure, as she would no doubt call it—inspired and encouraged many of the girls. The Faculty wives and those interested in Wesley College frequently joined the Red Cross group, and their readiness to help swelled the many packages which were sent off to headquarters.

There is no use denying the fact that we talked—and talked, and enjoyed every minute of it. We discussed many things, big and little—but, at heart, the chief interest lay in the mighty struggle and those who were representing us there. This common tie bound us together closely, and we were a peaceful, friendly group.

But willing hands were not the only need. Money was wanted, for finance was the lubricating oil which kept the machinery in running order. The girls gave willingly each term, but it was the work of the boys which enabled us to complete the year with such a splendid financial report. Their donations were large, surpassing even our fondest hopes. Miss Lightcap also gave a most enjoyable concert, the proceeds of which went into our treasury. The total receipts were $379.25, the total expenses were $189.56; the donation of the remainder to the Central Red Cross was $189.69.

Our Red Cross work occupied a large place in the hearts of the girls at Wesley. If we have, by the time spent in our Red Cross room every Tuesday afternoon, accomplished anything which will help our brave lads in khaki to bear the burden of lonesomeness, of sorrow or of pain, we feel that our work has been, indeed, richly rewarded.

PROBATIONERS EXECUTIVE

Theological Reconstruction

When the Probationers' Society last spring elected Arthur Rose president for the next term, there was a mild sensation. We all knew there would be something doing. We were right. Something has been done.

For years the society had jealously guarded its right to hold regular meetings at 4 p.m. every Friday in Room A. The slightest suspicion of an attempt to interfere or conflict with this ancient and sacred prerogative was the signal for indignant, noisy and mutinous protest. Arthur's first act on assuming office was to abolish that Friday afternoon meeting!

The president proceeded to a thorough reconstruction of the whole society. The tenure of office of the executive was extended from one term to the whole academic year. With the co-operation of Principal Crummy, distinguished visitors to the city were secured and induced to address the student body under the auspices of the Probationers' Society. Business meetings were called as occasion arose.

Thus, instead of being a divisive influence, the society was made to serve the whole college. One result was that the Theologs this year have taken a more active part in college life than ever before.

The first signal success under the new policy was the lecture by Dr. Roussel on war conditions in France. Coming fresh from the battlefields of Europe, Pastor Roussel was able to make his hearers vividly realize the meaning of the war to France. Dr. Stanstead, an Englishman who has attained prominence in America as an evangelist, was also among the visitors. Dr. Campbell brought a message from the University of Mount Allison, and Dr. F. C. Stephenson spoke in the interests of the Forward Movement.

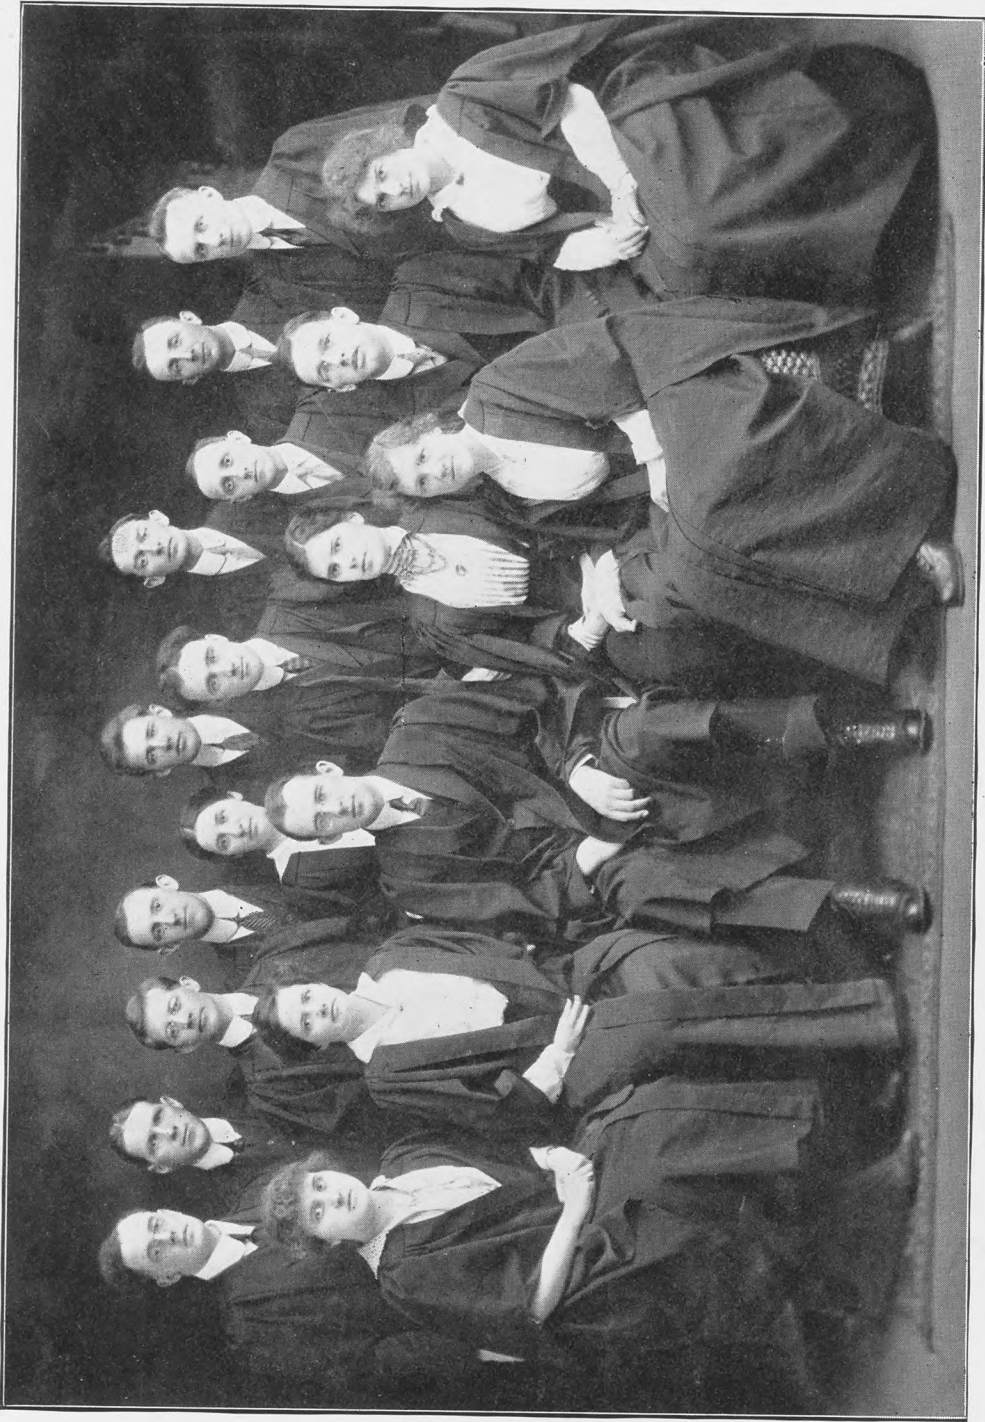

In the second term the war summoned many of the members to other service, and the college interests demanded concentration on the affairs of the student body as a whole. It was therefore in harmony with the new policy to withdraw all its own meetings, and this was done. This does not mean that the Probationers' Society has gone out of business. President Rose and his executive hand over to the new executive a rejuvenated organization, whose ideal it is to serve the interests of the whole Wesley community.

THE YEAR IN DEBATING AND ORATORY

Question—That the year 1915-16 in debating circles is the most successful in the history of the college.

Objection is immediately taken to above by one, Charles W. McCool, that staunch old campaigner, to the effect that the terms of the above resolution should include the United College Year. Mr. McCool being in charge of debating matters during the said year, such objection must be granted as original and decidedly characteristic of the argumentative spirit of the gentleman. Objection, however, is overruled.

For the affirmative:

In the first place the enthusiasm in debating has never before been so evident as this past season. Debating has probably been the central activity of student life. The halls have swarmed with eager orators—hordes of freshmen, too—clean-cut, intelligent youths, book laden and open-mouthed; little groups of girls might often have been seen fairly humming with the force of conviction instilled by the library route.

Secondly—The violent scenes at the close of each interclass debate are eloquent testimonies to the truth of the question at issue. Our halls have witnessed miniature “clems” (circus parlance). In some cases the judges escaped the infuriated rabble only with great difficulty.

Thirdly—Under this head we beg to submit several points:

First Year won the interclass championship; Childerhose, through overwork for a debate, had nightmares in which an excited politician stabbed him for advocating government aid to homesteaders; Arthur Rose, the debating president, not only was advisor to ardent aspirants to the honor of wearing the oratorical gown, but was our representative in the International Debate with North Dakota, and was victorious. Cuddy took the chair on most occasions; members of the faculty judged and criticized with long-suffering heroism. And finally our inter-collegiate representatives lost out only in the final round and were good seconders.

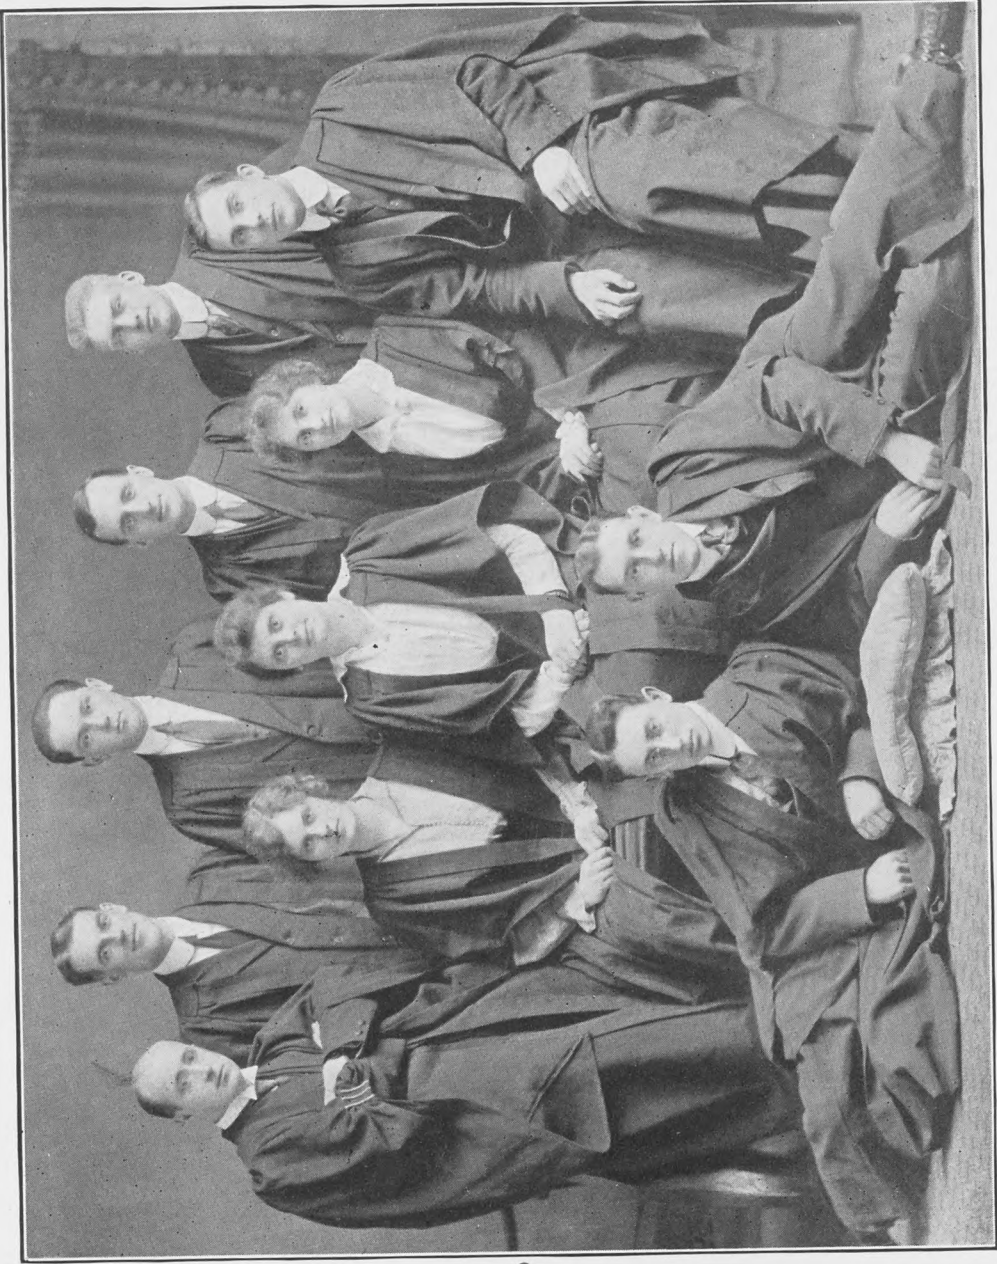

In the light then of these facts, we assert that the 1915-16 session among followers of the art of argument is “the best yet.”

For the negative:

No case submitted. Reason given—want of courage to stand up in face of the above points.

Therefore we declare that not only has debating of the past year been the most successful in the history of the college, but a very considerable achievement in the dreams and realities of the academic round.

WESLEY Y.M.C.A.

Our student Y.M.C.A. is an organization of all the men students of our college who wished to assist in creating an atmosphere of Christian purpose and expression among their fellow students.

During the past year the activities of this organization have been interrupted, as have been all other college activities, by time which was necessary for military training. Notwithstanding this fact, many of our fellows have met weekly in eight different groups for the study

Y.M.C.A.

of Mark on the Life and Teachings of Jesus. Five Wesley students (all of whom are now in khaki) lived in the Intercollegiate Y.M.C.A. Settlement House at 156 Austin Street, and directed voluntary services of eighteen of our men who assisted in the teaching of English to non-English speaking men, and in the directing of the activities of boys' clubs in the North End of the city. Eleven of our students have seen the need of Christian principle in non-Christian countries to the extent that they expressed their life purpose to be the filling of this need by volunteering for foreign missionary work.

The lives of many of our men have also been broadened by the Students' Conference at Lumsden Beach, Sask., and the Missionary Conference held for Brandon and Winnipeg students on November 12th, 13th and 14th, and by other gatherings arranged by the Intercollegiate Y.M.C.A. Executive. The annual conference for students of the three prairie provinces will be held again at Lumsden Beach this year on July 6th-13th. Our college will be represented.

In this way our organization has helped to develop a spirit among our students which will make for Christian service both while in college and in later life.

Athletics

The decision to maintain Wesley as an Arts College revived athletics of every nature in Wesley during the past year. Although no championships fell to our lot, our teams were championship contenders in every branch of athletics in which they participated. A new interest was added to Intercollegiate athletic competitions by the fact that the old-time rivalry was once more to the front in the friendly rivalry of Wesley and Varsity Colleges.

TRACK

Track athletics in Wesley were handicapped at the commencement of the year by the fact that it had been impossible to make any preparation for the building up of a track team until after college opened, and also by the lack of experienced men. Despite this, our track team made a good showing in the Intercollegiate Track Meet, and finished third, being beaten out for second place by only one point. The showing of the new men, most of whom were from the junior years, gave great promise for coming field meets. Two of these men, Murray and Halstead, were particularly prominent, and with a little more coaching they will be unbeatable in the sprints.

The relay race was without doubt the most exciting event of the meet, and the result was never in doubt after the splendid start made by Gardner. All our men ran well, and Tallin finished well ahead of his competitors.

FOOTBALL

"Cliff." Abbott and the football executive are to be congratulated upon the excellent showing of the Wesley football team this year. Last year the Wesley team seemed weak in nearly every department. This year the members of the team are, to a large extent, the same as last year, but the team has made an incomparably better showing. This result has been brought about, in a large part, by Captain Abbott, who not only played a stellar game himself, but had the rest of the team playing together well. They finished second, and were only defeated in two games, both of which were played on wet grounds, which seemed to bother our light, fast team. One of these games was with Agriculture, and one with Varsity, whom we had already beaten 2-0. Both games with St. John's resulted in victories, and we also carried off the majority of the points in our games with Medical. The junior team did not make as good a showing. They got away to a bad start, but towards the end of the season their team-play became more noticeable, and they won several games. When we consider that none of our senior team will graduate this year, we feel that the outlook for the future is indeed promising.

HOCKEY

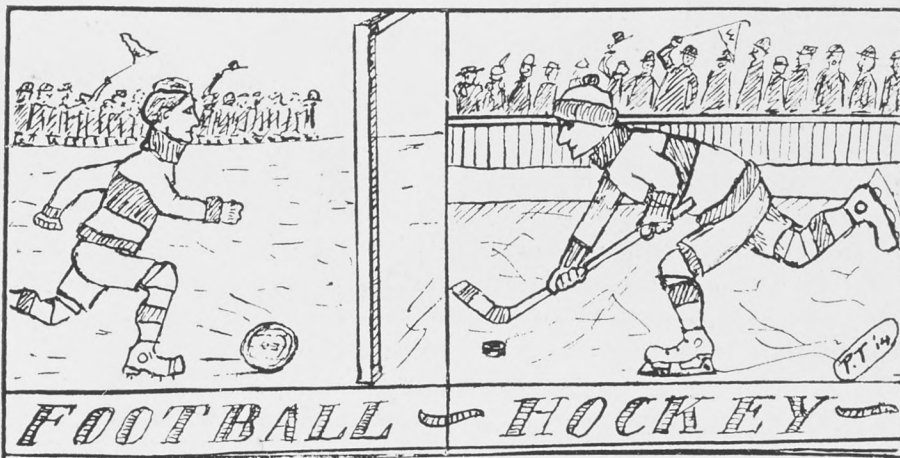

At the beginning of the year only three of last year's team were available, but with the advent of Jackson, Abbott and McColl, our chances for a championship team in hockey were considerably increased. However, "Doug." McColl, who had been elected captain, went overseas with the Motor Transport. Herb. Jackson was elected to replace McColl, and he has ably justified the confidence placed in him. He held the team together well, and, although they did not finish in the first division, they were a source of worry to every team in the league. Herb's goal-keeping throughout the year has been little short of the marvelous. The junior team had several good individual players, but their team-play was poor and they did not have a very successful season.

The greater part of the hockey honors won by Wesley were brought home by the Ladies' Hockey team, captained by Miss Patrick, which had a very successful season, losing only one game to Central Collegiate, whom they had previously defeated.

BASKETBALL

Our basketball team had a very successful year. Our hopes were higher in basketball than in other branches of sport, for in Tallin and Frank Matthews, the team captain, we had two basketballers upon whom we felt we could rely to build up a team of championship calibre from almost any kind of material. We were not disappointed. The team lost their first game, but from that time they were unbeatable, and we feel sure that with a double series they would have been at the head of the league. The game which we lost was against Engineers, who ultimately won the championship.

The only inter-class athletic competition during the year was in basketball. Six teams competed, and the Part II. Matriculation were the winners, losing only one game to Fourth Year.

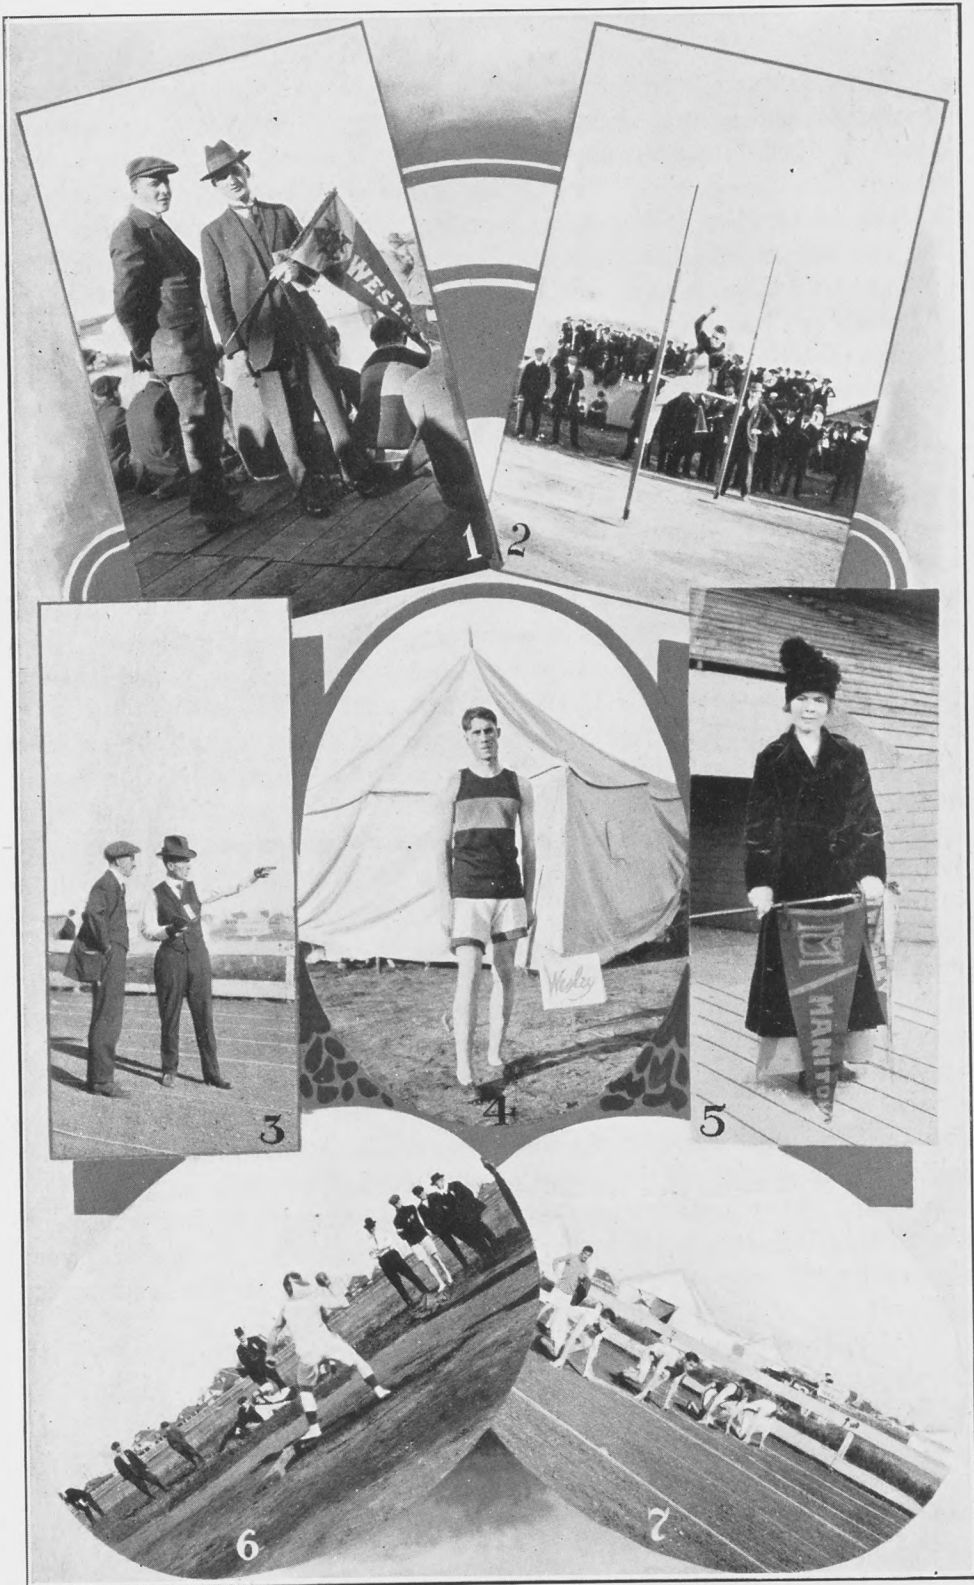

LIEUT. G. H. DYSON

By capable work in the C.O.T.C., George proved himself worthy of his commission in the University Battalion. Already his company has found out that he has the necessary qualities for leadership. 3rd Year students are proud of him, as well as of the other boys from the '17 class.

PROPHECY

The Seniors of the ladies' residence were enjoying themselves one evening after dinner in dizzy waltz and merry dance, the drawing-room lighted only by the coal fire in the grate. At last, a little tired, they sat down, some on the couch, some in the cosy corner, and others on the rug before the fire each, and all in a dreamy, expectant, I-would-like-to-know-the-future mood. Gazing into the flames for a few moments, as though each could see in the ever changing blaze the web of the future being woven, Kate said, "See, there are three queer little old women; they seem to me to resemble the goddesses of old, of whom Professor Joliffe likes to talk. Are they not the Parcae?"

Her question was at once answered by one of the three who appeared to be the leader of the group. "Yes, you have correctly guessed. We have come to tell you the future of the men of your class. But first you must feed this slowly dying fire with whatever you have in your college course found to be most precious to you." All at once there was a flutter of feminine skirts, a clatter of high-heeled shoes, as the girls scattered to make the collection. A moment—then the treasures began to pour in—a hockey-stick, a pile of invitations to afternoon teas, Stout's Psychology, a kewpie doll, a diamond ring, a fountain pen, a theatre ticket, a pair of tan rubbers, but the rubbers the Parcae rescued, objecting to their use as fire wood. Confessing herself satisfied with the other contributions, the leader lifted her spindle and began to weave, the others assisting her in the manipulation of the thread, while the eyes and mouths of the girls were open to hear.

Finally, in a slow and deliberate way, she began: "Your class numbers fourteen men—just saved from being unlucky, you see—and a brilliant success awaits each one as he goes out into life. With which one shall we begin? Mr. Jackson? I see him in the evening twilight, an old man. No, he is not alone. From a distant room comes the strains of 'Darling, we are growing old.' In his hand is a book, a drama, 'The Bankrupt,' from which he reads to her, pouring into her willing ears stories of the glory of those old days.

"Mr. Cuddy has become a college professor, revered, but somewhat absent-minded, and we are very sorry to say, gouty. In his first year classes he takes great pains to instruct the youth of the land in the difficult art of playing dominoes.

"Mr. Rose has succeeded Frank Camp in the leading role at the Dominion, and has made two very brilliant hits, which have placed him in the front rank in his profession. Make a point of hearing him in 'Are you a Mason?' and 'Charley's Aunt.'

"Mr. Scarlett—yes, I see him working diligently. He is arrayed in a gleaming white suit and in his hand is a bucket of paste. What for? To post bills announcing Mr. Rose's brilliant performances. He is also busy distributing complimentary tickets to the members of the '16 class.

"Mr. Simpson. What do I see? Only a few members of the old Wesley's Cupid's Battalion remain, but Mr. Simpson bugles bravely as of yore.

"Mr. Carruthers, because of his early interest in classes for young women, has become their champion, and is now Mrs. Pankhurst's private secretary. He is also her official window smasher and bomb-thrower.

"And what awaits him who is commonly called Chick? I see him in a crowded court room manfully pleading his own case. He is charged with lifting spoons from Sammie's, the Belge Cafe, the Princess, Jimmy's Hotel, and the residence. Though he pleads manfully year by year, the case still hangs over his head, and has for ten years been the bane of his existence. And not this case only. Some of his classmates have accused him of graft in connection with certain pop bottles. 'Tis well he studied law.

"Mr. Tallin has won fame with his Inter-linear translations of the Classics, which have knocked Kelly's Keys completely out of business. The professors look upon him with eyes not quite as tender as—

"Mr. Shortliffe has become known as a mathematical astronomer. He has discovered a connection between the earth and Mars, formed by prolonging the fourth dimension.

"Mr. Snyder is interested in beans. Yes, he solved the problem of what to do with Drewry's ale-house by turning it into a factory for Snyder's pork and beans.

"Mr. Matthew is proprietor of a Chinese restaurant, of which chop-suey is the specialty. He does laundry on the side.

"Mr. Pilling is reviving romanticism by his tenets re 'back to nature.' His chief slogan is 'Polish the Boots.'

"Mr. McColl has become a globe-trotter by aeroplane. He collects curios by the power of attraction.

"The last but by no means the least member of the group—you will see his name any day, Mr. W. A. Carrothers, M.P. Does that mean that Pat is a member of Parliament, you ask. Oh, no, M.P. doesn't stand for that. It means milk peddler."

Then these fair goddesses dissolved into thin air, the fire burned lower and lower, the girls sat pondering on the superior opportunities which were to be the lot of the male members of their class.

THE LADIES' RESIDENCE

No institution of Wesley College during the past year has been appreciated as much as the Ladies' Residence. Our home at 288 Broadway, provided for us by the Wesley College Women's Association and the Board of Wesley College, has been a home in the truest sense of the word. Miss Rowell, as Dean of the Residence, has done her utmost to make it as home-like as possible, and the Board of Management of the Residence has constantly added thoughtful little touches to our already cozy nest. And there is no girl who enjoyed the companionship of our happy family life who has not deeply appreciated the Residence and the kind thoughts which prompted those who established it.

For the first time the women students of Wesley have learned the real meaning of college life, for only by the intimate association which residence life affords can the true college spirit be fostered. Within our home, during the past year, close friendships have been formed which coming years shall not sever. None but those who have enjoyed it can realize just all that residence life means. In our close association with one another we have "struck the common chord" of seriousness and mirth. In long discussions during the midnight hours we have attempted to sound the depths of one another's philosophy, and though we have often come away still more puzzled than ever, yet it is with a broader view-point. And, on the other hand, we have enjoyed our hours of play, when all thoughts of lectures and examinations scattered to the four winds, we saw unsophisticated Freshies, irresponsible Sophomores, staid Juniors and dignified Seniors enter whole-heartedly into our games and amusements commonly associated with the nursery or kindergarten. The walls of our Broadway home could indeed tell strange tales, should they choose. Any of the rooms might recall the joys of those midnight "spreads," of those mysterious boxes from home which always signified another birthday—and it is surprising how many birthdays come during the winter months. The halls might remind us of those strange gymnastic performances, scheduled to begin at ten o'clock and continue till ten-thirty, when peace and quietness once more reigned. Nor has the drawing-room been overlooked during the year; about it cling dim memories of debates and dominoes. A careful perusal of our Doomsday Book in the hall might while away an idle hour, for many are the tales there recorded. True, it affords only the most meagre outlines, usually but the name, destination and hour of return, but they are sufficient to recall long trains of recollections.

For those who enjoyed the home life of our residence last year, there is but one cloud—that for the graduating class it is already but a pleasant memory. But we shall often remember those happy months, and some of us shall look back with vain regrets upon the “passing of the third floor back.” To Miss Rowell for her untiring efforts throughout the year, and to the members of the Board of Management, through whom the residence has been provided, the women students of Wesley express their deep appreciation.

In making a tour of the rooms of the Senior girls of the Residence, we observed that each girl seemed to have her favorite picture hung in the most conspicuous place on the wall. For future reference we make a note of these masterpieces:

Kate—“Alas, my poor brother.” Portrait of a cow.

Adeline—“By the Fireside.”

Florence—“A Little Irish Kewpie.” Very patriotic.

Jo—“Peace, Perfect Peace.” Very appealing.

Mary—An empty frame (we understand that the picture disappeared about April 1st).

Vivian—“Only a Memory.” A healthy-looking youth.

Gladys—“We are seven.” A ship.

Vivian—Yes, I always like to keep in the middle of the river so if the canoe upsets I won't have so far to swim ashore.

Mary (reading over the register in the hall)—J. H. with key—I wonder if it's Kelly's.

Vera (at close of a midnight spread)—Now let us sing “Auld Lang Syne.”

Ora—Oh, no, let us sing “God Save Our Men.”

LADIES' HOCKEY

It augurs well for the future of the Ladies' Hockey team that the year which has closed has been so successful. The girls were enthusiastic over the game, and their enthusiasm led them to many victories, always with the cleanest and fairest play. Much of their success is due to the untiring efforts and sympathetic watchfulness of the coach, Eber Crummy. The girls wish to express to him their gratitude for his help.

The Arena Rink was the scene of many a rousing practice, which lent grace and energy to the girls. It was also the battle-ground where opponents met in eager fray. Lusty yells were given to the accompaniment of beating hockey sticks, and intense was the excitement until the last moment of play. The girls do not forget that the presence of so many Wesley boys, always ready with the "Bukalaka," helped them on to victory.

Vera Patrick, the captain, deserves great credit for the manner in which her team played. "Fair play, even at the expense of victory," might well have been her motto. Vera, herself, as rover, played an excellent game. Vera Hull, as goal, was indeed "as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land." Many times the puck was turned back through her alertness. Clever work was done by Ada Banks, while Belle Hanson played cover point with spirit and straightforwardness. Marion Dent, as centre wing, was a faithful and energetic player. The right wing was taken by Alice Robinson, whose agility in handling the stick was particularly noticeable. Ora Adamson, as left wing, showed splendid work in her ability to intercept the puck. An efficient and ever-ready spare was found in Irene Irvine.

PROPHECY OF '16 GIRLS

"The time has come, as the Walrus said,
To speak of many things.
Of shoes and ships and graduates;
Of cabbages and kings."

Our graduates and their achievements in the halls of learning, the platform, in the sewing-room, on the campus, in fact, in all the diversified activities of college life, are well known to us. I might recall many happy memories to you, but the momentous question, as they stand tip-toe upon the threshold of life, is—what of the future?—the mysterious, surprising future? I was musing thus yesterday evening as sitting by the open fire-place and gazing into the dancing flames, the merry March wind lulled me to sleep. As I slept I dreamed, and in my dream, from a high mountain, I saw a "faire field full of folk." Let me transport you in thought to that magic place, and we will look down together. Who is that in the far-off corner?

"It was only a glad good-morning as she passed along her way,
But it spread the morning glory over the time-long day."

Yes, that's Kate, spreading sunshine in turbid, turbulent China. The little almond-eyed children cluster round, the silent mothers gather to hear her. See, girls, a dim but manly form moves beside her. He limps a little. Ah! how much that last march on Berlin cost! But we can see that Kate is radiant.

"Happy-go-lucky, fair and free,
Nothing on earth that bothers me."

Well, that's certainly true. Look at Ruth airily writing down the confessions of that awful criminal, Jack the Hutter, and calmly recording the startling evidence in the Foster divorce case.

You see, Ruth is court reporter down in Mexico.

The scene changes—

"As constant as the Northern star,
Of whose true fixed and lasting quality
There is no fellow in the firmament"

With much persistence we are not surprised to see Belle the foremost astronomer of the day. Watch her as she sits in her observatory in one of Winnipeg's finest suburbs, viz., Dugald. She discovered a new planet last week. Now she is making careful observations and recording them with scientific exactness.

There is a pleasant sight:

"She is meek, she is sweet,
She is modest and discreet,
She is rare, she is fair,
Vivian's every way complete."

But doesn't Joe look grand!

"None but herself can be her parallel."

That's the opening of Parliament, and Joe is victorious leader of the Pro-Anti-Retroprogressive party, and, of course, Premier.

What perfect composure! And yet she is introducing a bill limiting the male suffrage to returned soldiers.

Who comes here?

"Deep brown eyes, running o'er with glee;

Bonny brown eyes, they're the eyes for me."

Look at Gladys and her company. She is Colonel of the Women's Reserve Corps. Preparedness is her motto. She's little, but oh! my!

Incidentally, we notice that the battalion's hockey team, of which Glad is captain, won the Allan Cup this winter. But then Glad knows the game.

See who now advances—

"Mystery of mysteries,

Faintly smiling Adeline.

Scarce of earth or all divine—

Nor unhappy, nor at rest.

Wherefore those dim looks of thine,

Shadowy, dreaming Adeline?

Ah! she has just finished her master-piece, the great history play, entitled The Tragedy of Belgium. No wonder she is famous and tea-ed and dined so overwhelmingly. Why, Goldie Finesilver will play nothing but the product of her pen.

But girls, this scene grips one's heart-string—

"A little house well-filled,

A little field well-tilled,

A little wife well-willed

Are great riches."

See, that's Florence, the mistress of the Manse. How busy she is! Why, she leads the choir, she presides at the Ladies' Aid, gives lectures to the Home Economics Society, is treasurer of the Epworth League, secretary of the Debating Club, runs the Athletic Society, and withal finds time to write the minister's sermons and go pastoral visiting with him.

"The original and only seven-day advocate of true love."

Of course, Mary would always be an advocate of a good cause. That is the reason we see her occupying the position of Supreme Judge of the Juvenile Court. Mark her calm, unruffled brow and her tender counsel hear. This is no stern judge, untempered by mercy, for look, the culprit who came to defy remains to weep.

But hark! the newsies are calling an extra down there. What is it? Why, Mary has a suit in progress herself. And she's lost! Mr. Rogers vs. Cupid.

ALBERT C. COOKE

While the position of Senior stick is not an easy one to fill, Wesley students seldom fail to find the right man. It does not need a prophet, or a son of a prophet, to predict that the executive head for next year will brilliantly fulfil the functions of student leader. Mr. Cooke has brought distinction to his college already by his academic achievements; and can confidently assume his new office, knowing that he has the support of the entire student body.

Vox Wesleyana

Despite the constant changes which the world-war has involved, the staff of the college paper feels that congratulations are in order. "Vox" has always been good, but this issue brings to a conclusion the "Best Yet" volume. This is not written with a view to the praise and glory of the staff, but is merely expressing the general opinion of the professors, alumni, and students who are interested in Wesley's magazine. I think the above laudatory statement also should be made for another reason. Editors come and go, and all have contributed not a little to our premier place among college journals; but, in my estimation, Earle P. Scarlett has succeeded in a marked degree. Determined to produce a literary magazine, he has laboured himself, and has inspired others to supreme effort. The result has been that articles of outstanding value from the literary standpoint have been contributed, while the regular college features have not been neglected. It will undoubtedly be hard to sustain the paper at its present high level, but Wesley always looks forward with high hopes. Having the standard set, the new staff will bend all its energies to its task; and, on their behalf, the promise is made that Vox Wesleyana, 1916-1917, will still be in the van of Canadian publications issued under student government.

THE CLASSES

THE '17 CLASS

Subject in like manner with other classes to all the changes brought about by the European conflict, the Third Year has moved on to a successful conclusion. The usual class functions have been limited, as the seriousness of the times has demanded; but the spirit of good comradeship has abundantly manifested itself, and the socials which we have had, have been thoroughly appreciated and enjoyed. That the real purpose of college life has not been neglected by us, is demonstrated by the absence of any failure in examinations and by the gaining of nine University scholarships.

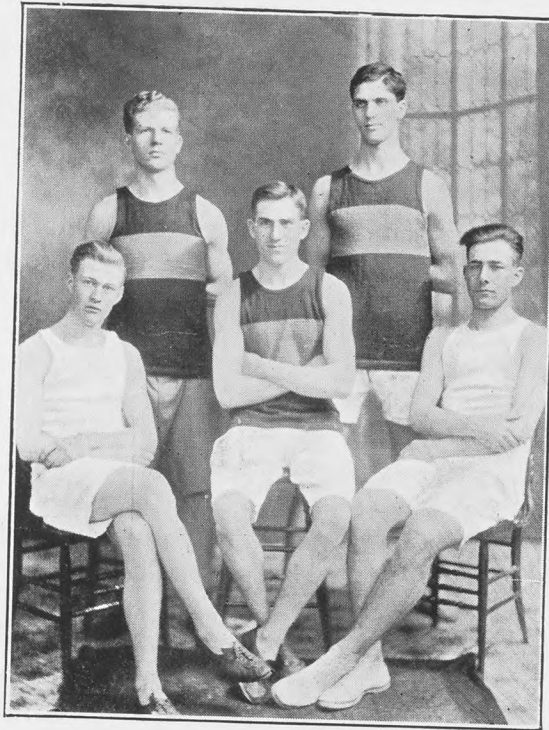

We have now stepped into the position of senior class in dear old Wesley, and already the feeling of responsibility is upon us. We are satisfied that in electing Albert Cooke as our student leader, no mistake was made; while Miss Edith Robertson will certainly prove an able lady stick.

It will be our aim not simply to keep up our class comradeship, but to further develop the college and university esprit de corps. In times like these we can easily dispense with the smaller divisions of college functions, and work together in the spirit of true Canadian democracy.

SOPHOMORES

A gentle wind whispered among the tall trees, the murmur of a lullaby among the grasses and violets mingled with my drowsiness, and I fell asleep. The muses must have wandered that way, for pictures of days which seemed but the glimmer of faint memories, passed before my wondering eyes.

What is this I see? Ah, yes! Could I, in so short a time, have forgotten my beloved college halls, my professors, my fellow students? Clad in gowns of sombre black and armed with books, we take our places in the class room. Why has this sudden trembling seized me? 'Tis but the vision of an essay marked D—, the sight of an unlooked-for history test, the images of that dreaded Wages' Fund Theory, the ghost of "unprepared" in Latin class.

But the ordeal has passed. Smiles appear again, merry laughter is heard. I hear someone whisper that magic word "Initiation." The secret cabinet meets. Many and weird are the threats and promises given to those greenest of the green—Freshmen and Freshettes. The long-looked-for day arrives. Clandestinely the Sophomores make their preparations. Vague noises and blood-curdling shrieks are heard.

But look! Convocation Hall is lit up; long tables are set; and a group of merry-hearted Sophomores are enjoying many good things after an evening at the slides. Congeniality and good fellowship are at their height when suddenly the room is plunged in darkness. The air seems filled with the soft "down" of little chicks. In a moment the lights are turned on again, and the Sophomores realize fully that the Seniors were but presenting them with enough feathers for their new Wesley cushions!

The hush as of approaching doom seems to settle upon me now. At last, the startling realization that examinations are only two weeks off has come. "Here passed a weary time," when only the bold and adventurous mocked the midnight hours with sleep. Feverishly I seemed to work, ". . . For night is come,

And I betake myself to study again,
Till patient searchings after hidden lore
Half wring some bright truth from its prison; my frame
Trembles, my forehead's veins swell out, my hair
Tingles for triumph. Slow and sure the morn
Shall break on my pent-room and dwindling lamp
And furnace dead,"

The task is over, and now I await the reward. With faltering footsteps and chattering teeth, I enter the "U." in company with my class-mates. Why, yes! We all passed, and what is this I see? Scholarships! Brilliant Sophomores!

Memories fade. The soft wind is whispering still its crooning song to the blue-eyed violets at my feet.

FIRST YEAR ARTS

Class '19 holds the unique record of being the first Arts Class to begin its work under the guidance of Dr. Crummy. Class '19 came to Wesley at the beginning of a new era in the college work—at the beginning of a period of re-organization. To the best of its ability the class has met and overcome its difficulties, and has during its first year worked for the good of its Alma Mater.

The class has been organized for every activity of college life. A class executive was elected to conduct the welfare of the class. Debating, dramatic and social and literary representatives to each of these societies were chosen early in the term.

The class record for the first year has been a good one. Class '19 was successful in winning the cup representative of inter-class debating championship. Never before has this cup been won by a freshmen class. On college field day this won second place, being only one point below the winning class. On examinations the names of many of the students stand in the honor list.

The nineteen boys have answered nobly the call of the Empire. The class honor roll now holds thirteen names. Some are already in England. All have the best wishes of their fellow students.

The social functions of the class and of the college have shown in the class the true college spirit—loyalty to the class and to the college. The various activities of college life have drawn forth the best from the class. Nor has the '19 class been found lacking. It has at least tried to uphold the traditions of Wesley.

PART II. MATRICULATION, 1916

Perhaps never before in the history of educational institutions have students had to face their year's work with so many distracting circumstances about them, as students have had to do in the year just closed. The shadow of the great war has loomed large upon us all, and each man has had to discover for himself in what path his duty lay at this time of national crisis. The Matriculation Part II. class has been no exception to this.

We began our year's work under the inspiration of Wesley's new regime, yet also under the shadow of doubt as regards our duty. Those who were old students recognized that there was a new spirit breathing through our college halls. Those who were Freshmen felt there was, and the spirit entered into them. True to the spirit of Wesley, they obeyed the decree of the gods and appeared in class on Initiation Day unadorned by neckwear of any kind save that of spotless linen collar or the more humble, yet fresh-washed, celluloid. Initiation Land being safely explored and the beauty of their nether limbs enhanced by the red and blue, they felt themselves one with the fraternity of Wesley.

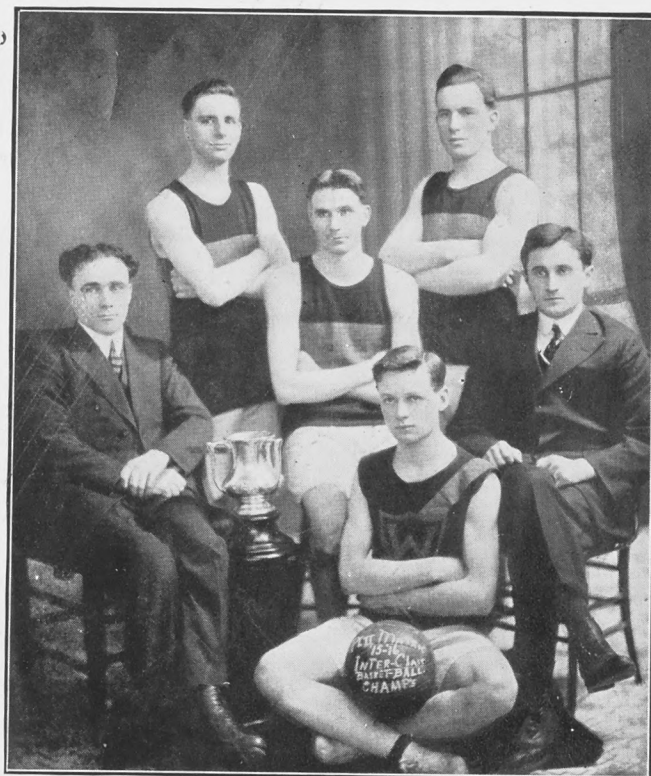

Our class began large in numbers and eager in spirit. It is now scattered far and wide. Many of our men are residents of the Canvas City of the Sand Hills. Others have crossed the seas and are now in training in England or at the front in the sand-dunes of Belgium or the war-ravaged plains of France. Enlistments began early, and the restlessness engendered thereby has remained with us all through the year. Out of 30 boys in the class 14 are in khaki.

Changes in our teaching staff also militated against our work. At Christmas our beloved Mr. Argue took sick and was absent from us for a long time. His place was well filled by Mr. Scarlett, who soon appeared in khaki.

Mr. Shortliffe had to relinquish his work in Physics and his place was taken by Mr. Anderson. Our Latin teacher, Mr. Gardner, followed the sartorial preference of the majority and donned the khaki. His work was taken up by the genial Dr. Billings. While all our teachers have been men of ability, these frequent changes added to the difficulty and restlessness caused by the war.

In class activities we have not been lax or unsuccessful. Matriculation, by a series of brilliant games, captured the basketball shield. In debating we were not so successful, but we succeeded in obtaining decisions against the 3rd and 4th years. Two very successful and entertaining socials were held by the Part II. Class. They also united with Primary and Part I. in presenting Messrs. Argue, Melvin and Gardner with rings when they joined the colors. In other college activities we also took our part.

Class work has not all been dull. Under the sparkling humor of Mr. Shortliffe it was often very entertaining; under Mr. Argue it was character-developing; under all it was instructive.

WILLIAM ALEXANDER CARROTHERS

"Great in council and great in war"

In Ireland they called him William Alexander Carrothers, a name to be proud of, but at Wesley he is familiarly known as "Pat." This is due partly to his nationality and partly to his ready wit, general affability and manly sincerity. His broad sympathies and tastes have gained him a large circle of friends wherever he is known. Pat is also endowed with marked abilities of administration and leadership. As Senior stick he has been invaluable to Wesley at a time when she was in great need of a reconstructive genius. Wesley is proud of her Senior Sticks, and "Pat" has upheld the traditions of that famous line. Scholarships have lain at his feet; debaters have been vanquished by his convincing eloquence; and order has been brought out of chaos in regenerated societies. Yet, notwithstanding these Herculean labours, Pat was always one of the "jolly old pals" of the top flat when victuals disappeared, water descended and feathers floated softly through the air.

At present "Pat" has laid aside academic and clerical garb for the colors of the King. His abilities soon brought him promotion, for he now holds the rank of Captain. It is said there is a gentle heart awaiting his safe return to post-graduate work.

MARY ALICE RODGERS

"All the Latin I construe is 'amo' I love."

During Mary's entire college course her ability has been as varied as successful. Studies alone were not enough for her, Red Cross, Y.W., sports, dramatic and debating, in all she has proven herself the embodiment of good leadership. As a speaker, Mary holds a unique position in college history, having been twice chosen as an intercollegiate debater. Realizing her strong personality and outstanding capacity for work and play she was chosen "Lady Stick." She has been the unfailing Information Bureau for the girls, and nothing has been too much trouble, nothing too great or too small to be done for others. Mary's appreciation of good things, her cheerfulness and her sense of humor have made her the ideal college girl. She leaves us—but not "heart-whole," for our hearts will always be with the one who smiled and said "Barkis is willing."

E. I. V., '54.

A. I. A. CARRUTHERS

To look upon the neat and well groomed figure of Bert is to be conscious that you are in the presence of the Beau Brummell of the '16's. His faculty for neatness is characteristic of everything he does. In manner he is quiet and unassuming, and only those who are his friends realize the unflinching purpose, the steadfast courage and the intense but restrained enthusiasm that spurs Bert on to his goal.

He has a habit of attending to the duties that call for strenuous work and bring little fame.

In college activities he has done well. As circulating manager of Vox he has secured a record number of contributors. The high esteem in which he is held by his fellow students is clearly shown by his election to the presidency of the Intercollegiate Y.M.C.A. Success will attend him, for he is among those whose motto is "To strive, to seek, to find and not to yield."

A. R.

CLIFFORD CHILDERHOSE

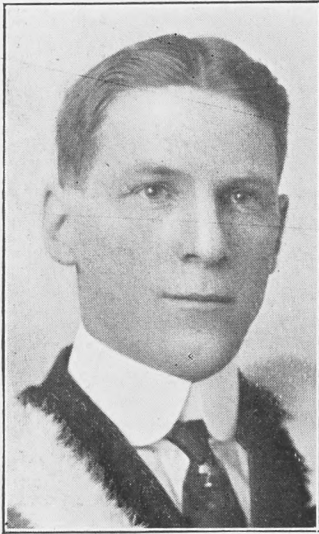

Scene I. An unsuspecting student lazily ascending the stairs. A sudden opening of the heavens and waters descending. Unsuspecting student soaked dashes to a certain room. Finds there another student deeply buried in history of the French Revolution—thinks himself mistaken and departs, vowing vengeance on the gods.

Scene II. A student who has been enjoying the evening in the city with his friends returns and finds that the spirits of darkness have been holding a pow-wow in his room. He has had a place for everything, but he finds nothing in its place. The aforesaid student of history saunters along, enters, offers his sympathy, assists in bringing order out of chaos, and suggests that a search be made for the evil spirits.

Chick, by his pranks, has made life in Wesley really enjoyable, and we are sorry that there is no one to take his place. He has taken an active part in debating, has been chosen to represent his class on the Students' Council, and has taken an active part in the social life of the college. This year he held the responsible position of General Student Treasurer. He succeeded in representing the Junior Football team. There is no more deservedly popular student in the college, and the heartiest good wishes of all go with him.

W. A. C.

WILLAM ALEXANDER CUDDY

"A true friend and a steady companion."

Those who know him best, love him most. Alex. is one who can always be depended on, whether it be to perform some applied task or defend one when accused of water-throwing.

Alex.'s achievements have been many. Sports were his delight, and as a member of the Senior Hockey team he did much to maintain the traditions of Wesley.

His chief interest, however, has been in the field of debating, in which he has been a great organizer and an opponent always to be reckoned with. Scholarships, too, have been in his line from first to last.

'Tis said by some that Alex. has taken a great interest, as a spectator, in the fascinating game of dominoes. The Y.M.C.A. has had no firmer supporter than Alex. Cuddy (on dit—neither has the Y.W.C.A.)

With others of the sixteens, he has donned the khaki, and is in the 196th.

Although Alex.'s profession is not yet definitely decided upon, his manly worth, his capacity for work combined with an insatiable thirst for knowledge guarantees him success in whatever profession he may chose to pursue.

C. R. C., '16.

VIVIAN DICKINSON

"October, 1911. Found at Wesley College, two students escaped from Selkirk."

Vivian was one of these. The '15 "gang" hailed her as one of their own, but with prophetic vision she saw that the best was yet to come, and decided to join the ranks of the sixteens.

What was the loss of the fifteens has been our gain, for Vivian has been a standby in the class. She has always been a willing helper in all activities, not for personal recognition, but in the wider interests of the college.

Her friends appreciate her sincerity, her ready sympathy and bright disposition. Vivian has a depth of quiet humor, best expressed by her ability for impersonating. "There's more in her than thou understandeth."

G. P. R., '48.

RUTH FOSTER FISH

"Wearing all that weight of learning lightly like a flower."

Ruth's sojourn among us has been short, but those who have come to know her have found in her an ever willing helper and one upon whom you can always rely. Ruth is game for anything, and her fondness for tall people and the Fort Garry Hotel or Broadway sometimes has led her far away from Portage Avenue and Wesley College. To look at Ruth one could never imagine that the "dark" reports we have heard rumored up here about her previous college career could possibly be true. Ruth's witty remarks and originality have found her many friends around Wesley, and as she goes forth into the great "unknown" she carries with her our best hopes for a happy and useful future.

V. L. H., '19.

KATHERINE M. GREENBANK

"A noble mind, a heart sincere,
One, whom to know, is to revere."

In the stretch of a four years' college course few girls have unconsciously exerted a greater influence over the co-eds than Kate. She will be admired by the Faculty for her prowess in scholarship meets, but by the girls she will be loved for her cheerful helpfulness and ready sympathy. By being a friend she has made friends. Kate possesses high ideals, and when her support is given we know that it is to a cause which is "worth while." Her efficiency work as Y.W. president is merely a stepping-stone to a life of further service—for Kate is a student volunteer. But Kate's interest has been limited by no means to serious things. She is equally at home at a church service or at a "fashionable" restaurant. Her wide appreciation ranges from Bible study to good coffee inclusively. So—here's to "Jack," for she's a jolly good fellow!

V. I. E., '54.

BELLE ELIZABETH HANSON

"Here is a dear and true industrious friend."

In Belle we have a rare combination—a student and yet a lover of sport. It is no vain boast when she says "I'll be there," she means it and will be there—and be there on time also. Belle's brilliancy in mathematics in her first year was the envy of her class-mates. But mathematics proving unsatisfactory as an extra-mural course, she chose Political Economy and English instead. Belle has taken an active part in tennis, hockey and basketball, and her ideals of fair play and good sportsmanship have won our admiration. A sincere friend and a steady scholar, the future holds in store for Belle a happy and useful career in the instruction of the young in the way of wisdom.

N. L. H., '19.

JORUN HINRIKSON

"Who saw life steadily and saw it whole."

Jo is a true daughter of the prairies. The broad Saskatchewan plains have fostered in her a spirit of fair-minded inquiry and deep sincerity of purpose. In spite of her naturally retiring disposition, Jo has proven herself more than equal to any responsibilities which she has assumed. Her enthusiastic support of anything which she undertakes, has been evidenced this year in her ready services on the Red Cross Executive. Jo is no stranger to the platform. Her natural gift for public speaking, her sound judgment, and her clear perceptive power have made her a formidable opponent in the arena of debate.

Those few who have been privileged to penetrate beyond the slight barrier of reserve have found in Jo a friend,

"With all a friend's best virtues shining bright."

V. A. F., '37.

FLORENCE MARGARET HUMBLE

"Oh, girls, look at that poor dirty kitten. Isn't he a darling—but so cold."—is characteristic of Florence, whose sympathies range from stray cats to Henry George's single tax system.

Ever-ready cheerfulness and the art of seeing a humorous setting for the most serious incidents has made her the centre of attraction at all the Residence "feeds."

On first acquaintance, Florence impresses you with her magnetic and interesting personality, but this does not reveal the deeper side of her nature—a treasure unlocked only by the key of intimate friendship.

Independent thought on all modern problems, an unflinching demand for fair play to all who are oppressed and the ability to work faithfully for any cause which she deems worthy of support, are characteristics which will enable Florence to find her niche in advancing, "not herself, but others."

V. K. G., '37

GEORGE HERBERT JACKSON

"He was six feet o' man, A1, Clear girth an' human natur'."

The main and effective attributes of George Herbert Jackson are his forceful virility, his persistence and his wide versatility. He is the Roosevelt of the '16 class. With a sledge hammer method all his own, effective yet not sensational, he is the real Simon-pure, star-of-destiny Rough Rider. In his college career he has been captain of the hockey team, the leading figure in dramatics, head of the Y.M.C.A.; he has drawn pictures for fun, studied books as a pastime; he was a high jumper of note, and between times ate dinners and made speeches. And then when it was all over he went out for the evening to make a call. Herb. joined the army in February and is now training at Niagara with the 4th Divisional Cyclists. Wherever he is, he will be sure to do his share with "a little bit of alright," as the Tommies say.

And so Herb. has brilliantly plunged through his college course. And he will continue to go straight ahead until he makes his goal. Until that time he will probably continue to say, "Well, I've got to go out tonight, but"—and he means it, too.

E. P. S.

FREDERICK FRANK MATTHEW

"An exquisite invention this."

Matt. entered Wesley in the fall of 1911. The evidences of his genius are many and clear. He matriculated in one year, obtained a scholarship in his Freshman year, and all through his course maintained a high standard as a student. He has always taken an active part in basketball, and had the honor of being on a championship team. He has been an active worker in the Y.M.C.A., has represented his class in debating, and in his Sophomore year served on the now famous Initiation Committee. Such is the record of that quiet-looking, six feet of humanity, who always greets one with a smile, and whom we familiarly call Matt.

Those who know Matt. best have no doubt that by his strong character, his high ideals, and geniality of disposition, he will exercise a strong influence for good wherever his lot may be cast.

W. A. C.

DOUGLAS ROWLEY McCOLL

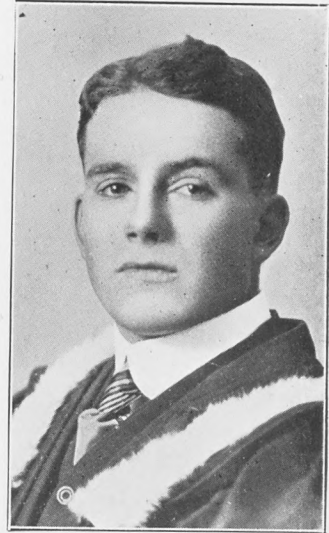

"A clear fire, a clean hearth and the rigor of the game."

The wish of Douglas Rowley McColl is much the same as the above expression of fine old Sarah Battle. The girls say that Doug. is a nice boy, with a smile and a Bohemian disposition. The boys always speak of him as a "good scout." His friends know him as one who always plays the game, a fellow of imagination and of ideas—and with the nerve to fight for them. Doug. spent his early years in the east, attended High School in Winnipeg, enjoyed the same Gypsy college career as the rest of the '16 class, taking his final year in Wesley. He may be said to have three hobbies—girls, moving pictures and hockey. His idea of Paradise is built on the same plan as Room 10, main dormitory.

Doug. enlisted with the Imperial Army Motor Transport division, went overseas in January and is now seeing service in German East Africa. We can imagine his favorite expression—"Step on her, old sport"—breaking the stillness of the tropical night.

One can only do justice to Doug. when the lights are turned on and the grate is lit and "over the walnuts and the wine" friends talk and dream of "the old familiar faces" of the Wesley days.

E. P. S.

HAROLD H. PILLING

First glimpses are often deceptive, and nowhere is this more true than in the case of Harold. In the quiet, unassuming and finely-featured face one does not suspect the sparkling wit and intensely keen intellect which Harold has displayed amongst his class-mates. He has that versatile and sympathetic disposition which makes him a friend of everyone. His election to the presidency of the Social and Literary and of the '16 class in its final year bears evidence of the popularity and respect in which Harold is held by the college students.

His service on the famous Initiation Committee of 1913-14 marks his tendency for fun. As cartoonist of the college year book he has shown his ability to depict the imaginative hilarity of his brain.

The stage has also felt his presence. As one of the principal characters in "Admirable Crichton," his dramatic talent proved to be of a high order.

We regret that Harold was unable to write off his final examinations this spring, and we hope that his health will soon permit him to complete his course.

His versatility and warm-heartedness will, we are confident, assure for him the respect and warm friendship of all with whom he may associate.

F. M., '16.

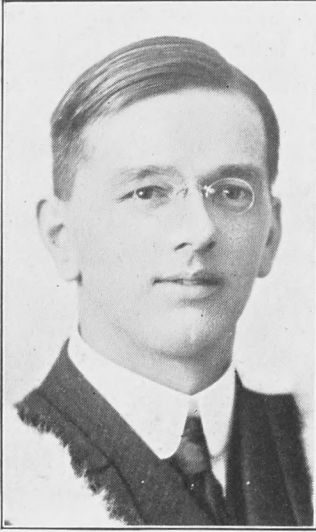

GLADYS PETTINGELL

"She made it a practice to put all her worries down in the bottom of her heart, then sit on the lid and smile."

Gladys is—well, she's just Gladys, and there is no one exactly like her. Somehow she just radiates laughter and happiness, and makes you feel you're glad that you're alive, for she herself is so unmistakably in love with life. Her name calls up a picture of an energetic little figure with dancing black eyes, graphically describing the last victory of the valiant Sixty-first. In the class room, in the Residence, and in sport, Gladys has always proven herself "true blue," and the many warm and sincere friendships which she has formed during these years of college life will extend far beyond the halls of old Wesley.

F. M. H., '16.

ARTHUR ROSE

Yorkshire is noted for its bracing breezes and its keen, dogmatic men; Arthur is the personification of his northern county. Perseveringly he has gone on his way through college, finally proving his erudition by being a scholarship man in philosophy. Our Alma Mater delights to crown the sons who honour her, so it is no wonder that he has been both president of the Probationers' Association and president of the Debating Society. His election by the University to be International Debater was popular among his fellow students and justified by its success.

The Empire has called, and Arthur has answered. Private Rose of the "196th" leaves college, having contributed not a little to the academic and social life of Wesley.

"We needn't tell we liked you well. Good-bye—
Good luck to you."

T. H. N.

K. ADELINE RUSTON

"I love her for her look, her smile, her way of speaking gently."

Adeline is a girl whom to know is to love. Her idealism and unselfishness are sterling qualities which have shone brightly during her brief sojourn among us, and which have endeared her to the girls. Adeline's meekness when in the company of the professors is scarcely compatible with her daring in the company of kindred spirits in the Residence. Adeline always follows her own sweet will, whether it be by defying Residence rules and taking measles, or by overcoming the unwritten laws of the college and captivating the hearts of the History class. Until her third year, Adeline was a worthy student of Victoria College, Toronto, but Victoria's loss was Wesley's gain, and we are proud to claim Adeline as one of our graduates. "She who hath done well, needs not another's praise."

I. E. V., '54.

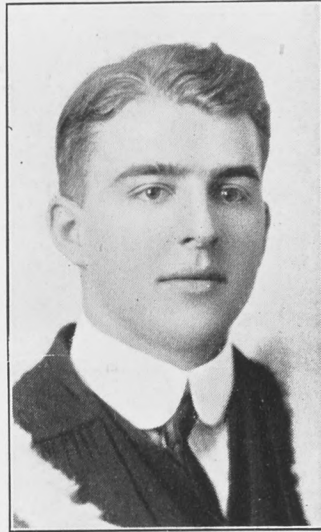

EARLE PARKHILL SCARLETT

"An itch I had, a sting to write, a tang!"

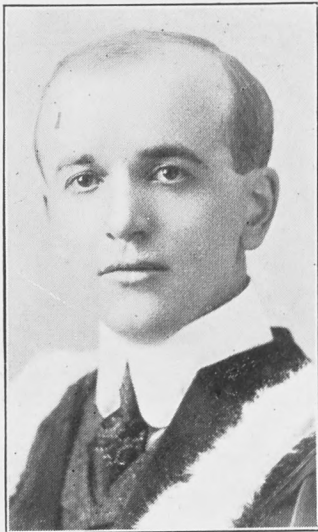

Behold, gentle reader, the editor of Vox! Just a score of years have elapsed since Earle Parkhill Scarlett honored the little town of High Bluff, Man., with his birth. We regret that we must pass over the early years of our hero's life owing not to lack of interest but rather to lack of space.

We can all of us remember, though, in those days of first impressions, the quiet, unassuming chap who, notwithstanding his modest manner, created such a stir in English classes and ruthlessly shattered our scholarship dreams. This habit Earle clings to throughout his course, and he leaves the University with a most enviable list of scholarships at his belt. Although it was his intellectual ability that first won Earle prominence, it is one of his best characteristics that he is able, at all but the proper times, to forget his scholastic pre-eminence and become "one of the boys." Perhaps, even, when we of the '16 class look back upon the distant scene, Earle will be remembered not as the brilliant student, not as the capable editor, but as the man whose absence discounted any gathering of the clan, rendered tasteless any dinner at the Venice, and was not known at any Mary Pickford film.

As an added preparative to his life's work, Earle has decided to settle this war question. Consequently, he leaves for Berlin with the 4th Divisional Cyclists. We wish him luck!

DELBERT LEWELLYN SHORTLIFFE

The subject of my story is a Nova-Scotian, a Blue Nose, of delicate frame, with a head rather bald and of geometrical shape, the latter indicating the highly specialized development in mathematics. Though he has had many handicaps during his college course, such as being married, and teaching in the Matriculation department of Wesley, he has been able to win scholarships and medals in mathematics. Indeed, in this mathematician we find at times, along with his superlative joy and veins of pessimism, a genius for writing poetry. No one knows exactly the versatility of my subject. It may be that in future years we shall find him anything from a teacher to a famous mathematician or a philosopher.

H. E. S., '16.

JAMES WENDELL SIMPSON

The scholarly-appearing youth on the left (or the right, or the bottom, or the top, as the case may be) was born in Ashton, Ontario, on the 18th of November, nineteen years ago. His career up to the age of nine was not marked by any special want except getting his second teeth; but his ninth birthday heralded an important epoch in his life. He came west, young man, came west. Consequently, we have the pleasure of his company on this page today.

He attended the city schools, and upon leaving the Central Collegiate, he turned Wesley-ward to slake the burning thirst for knowledge which he had acquired. From that time on, together with the rest of the class, his was a cycle of wandering, to rest at last where he started.

In his third year he chose to specialize in French and English, and won a scholarship in the former subject. In his fourth, he represented the college on the Track team high jump. He also played on the class basketball team. As class secretary-treasurer he has proved an adept at coaxing the pennies from the deep fourth year pockets.

He will join the sawbones, the Order of the Black and White.

G. H. J.

H. EMERSON SNYDER

Three years ago Emerson came amongst us. As we marked his genial presence, listened to his brilliant conversation, and heard his hearty if not musical laughter, we said "Behold, a man." He came to us with a record of successes achieved in the Faculty of Education of Toronto University, and as headmaster of a school in Ontario. In every department of college life he has enhanced his reputation and brought distinction to our Alma Mater. Each year he has gained a scholarship, and as business manager of "Vox" his success has been almost phenomenal. On Intercollegiate Field Day he brought honor to Wesley, and as debater and debating representative he has worthily sustained the high traditions of his class. Emerson aims to make learning's crabbed page simple and inspiring to Canada's youthful scholars. May he live long!

"Giving out, year by year,

Recruits to true manhood and womanhood dear.

GEORGE PERCIVAL RAYMOND TALLIN

"The last of all the Romans, this is he."

You all do know "Pete" Tallin. How well I remember the first time I met him. 'Twas on an Autumn evening in his tent, that day he overcame the 'Tobans and Wesley won the Track championship. Ever since that day "Pete" has been a leader in college athletics, especially basketball and baseball. As captain of the Track team last fall, he worked hard to uphold Wesley's honor on Field Day, himself not least, as his collection of medals clearly proves.

Classics has fascinated him for the last two years, and many a midnight hour has passed drowsily by as he thumbed his Greek Lexicon or pondered over Plato. The Governor-General's medal was just within his grasp, when Mars decreed the prize must be denied. Perc. heard the call to arms with Spartan fortitude, and is now Physical Instructor in the Universities' Battalion with the rank of sergeant.

He is an enthusiastic exponent of all-round manly development. As president of the Y.M.C.A. he won the admiration of all the boys by his sterling qualities and high principles. His sympathetic heart and unselfish loyalty have gained for him many life-long friends, not only among his own class but also among the '13 graduates.

CHARLIE McCOOL TO FLETCHER ARGUE

"I see a lot of things here that I didn't expect. For example, there appears to be less strictness about saluting, etc., here than in Canada. Staff officers must be saluted, but otherwise in the towns it is 'go as you please.' The first night I went to town, Joe Bloomer and I were in a restaurant when a couple of officers sat down with us and joined in our conversation. I had imagined that such a proceeding would be taboo.

"There is more talk here of an early peace than there is in Canada; and men from the front tell me that in France there is even a stronger belief that the war will soon end, and that the same opinion is held by Germans taken prisoners."

Theological Graduates

WILLIAM EWART CALLOW

W. E. Callow comes from Lancashire, England. Was educated in the public schools and later graduated from the Marine Engineering School. He then crossed the ocean and preached for a while in Smith's Falls, Ontario. Later he came to Manitoba, and labored successfully on the Medora and Coulter Circuits. During these latter years, he took a course in public speaking.

While at college, he was also pastor of the Morris Circuit, being ably assisted by his wife. Mr. Callow thus had other interests apart from his studies, which accounts for his reluctance in taking office in college affairs.

However, we do not hesitate to predict a useful career for Mr. Callow, and certain he will uphold the traditions of Methodism in the Methodist ministry.

D. M.

GEORGE HOLGATE

The Fall Term of 1912 brought George Holgate to the halls of Wesley, and ever since the kindly unobtrusive "Bishop" has gained a place in many a heart.

His modesty does not lack initiative—witness his prowess in debate and his eloquent outburst which secured him a place in the oration contest last year. In Holgate we have a strange quality of self-consciousness and self-abandon; metaphorically speaking, he can "hesitate" and also do the "Highland fling."

George has made good as a student, and has gained much from college social life, and to those who know him he has given much. He was secretary to the Dramatic Society last year, and this year he has done good work on the Debating Executive and the Probationers.

C. T. W.

A. W. KEETON, B.A.

"I am dynamite" (Nietzsche)

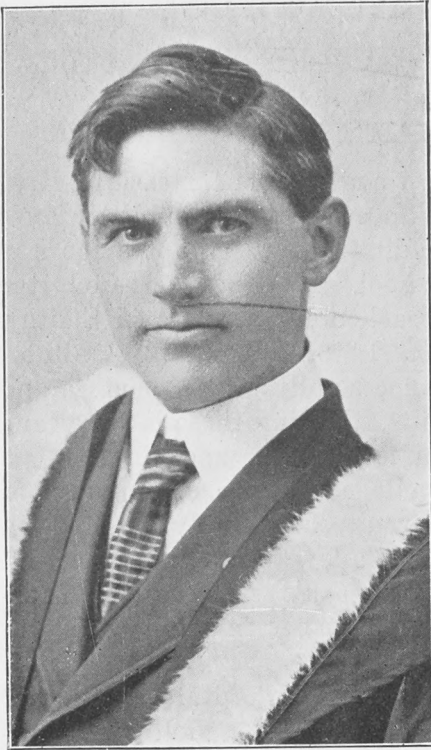

Bert is a man who can "make things happen." By the aid of his marked intellectual qualities he has won so many gold medals, scholarships and literary prizes, that it is not easy to give a complete record of his successes. But we know that he has two gold medals hidden somewhere, and on several occasions envious students have watched him enter a bank to cash cheques for University scholarships.

Such achievements, however, appear to have been a mere side issue, for meantime Bert was busily occupied with student activities, winning success in almost every department.

Last year, by appointing him stick, the students conferred upon Bert the highest honor in college activities.

So here's to Sergt. Keeton of the University Battalion; suaviter in modo, fortiter in re.

H. T. R.

JAMES MALLEY

"By their fruits ye shall know them" we are told. It is, therefore, certain that "Jimmy's" name will not go down to posterity among the famous Theologians or Philosophers!

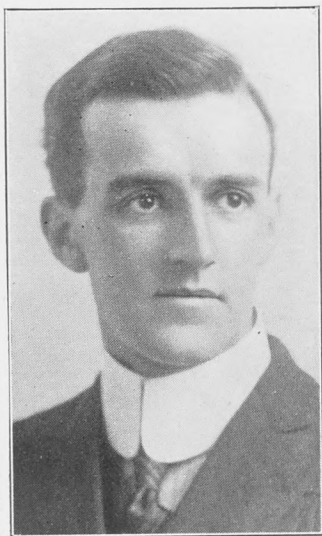

With an artistic disposition, the great struggle of his life has been to comply with the bare requirements of regular class work.

We shall remember him—not by the lead he has taken in the ordinary things—but in the extraordinary.

From first to last he has been a leading figure on our musical and social committees, and more earnestly than any of us has striven to secure a larger place for music in the life of our Alma Mater. His associates will never forget him! His whole-souled devotion to this phase of college life has left a permanent impression upon us all.

E. R.

DAVID MORRIS

Beginning his career in Wesley in 1912, "Dave" did not spring into prominence early. Gradual development however has made him exceedingly useful to Wesley in his final year. His Welsh fire, and rapidity of movement, have been valuable factors, and as centre forward on our Senior Football team he has been responsible for many a "stinging" goal.

He has served as vice-president on the Athletic and Basketball Executives; and as acting president of the '16 class, since our president enlisted.

As president of the Social Service Executive of the Intercollegiate Y.M.C.A.'s, Dave has accomplished much. Working against great difficulties and constant discouragements, he has striven unsparingly to bring this work before us, and as a champion in this connection he will be most remembered.

E. R.

ALBERT WORSNOP MULLETT

Bert was born a son of the parsonage at Framlington, England. He heard the call of the Canadian Methodist Church for men, and came to Canada in 1909. Spent two years on the southern circuit, Sask., afterwards entered Wesley.

At college, Bert was a "studious" student—always in the running for scholarships. In athletics, he was there with the goods. He represented his class in basketball, and played on the Senior Football team in 1914-15.

We were sorry to lose him at Christmas, when he was called to the Ardath Circuit, Sask.

Bert has a fine personality; is full of grit, gumption, and common sense. Moreover, he is a forceful preacher. Possessing these inestimable qualities, his success is assured.

D. M.

WALTER LEWIS PATTESON

W. L. T. Patteson was born in the year 1886, in the county of Devonshire, England, a county which has been made famous by Drake, Hawkins and Samuel Taylor Coleridge. He came to Canada in 1909, and immediately began his probation in the Methodist ministry. From 1909-11 he laboured successfully in South-East Saskatchewan, and for the last two years he has been pastor of Morse Place Church, Winnipeg.

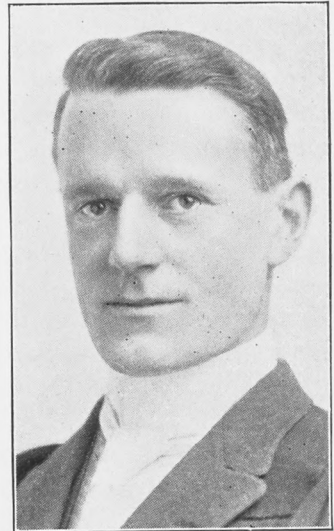

Walter entered Wesley College in 1911, and though he has rarely taken active part in college life, his classmates know him as a boy of sterling qualities and generous spirit.

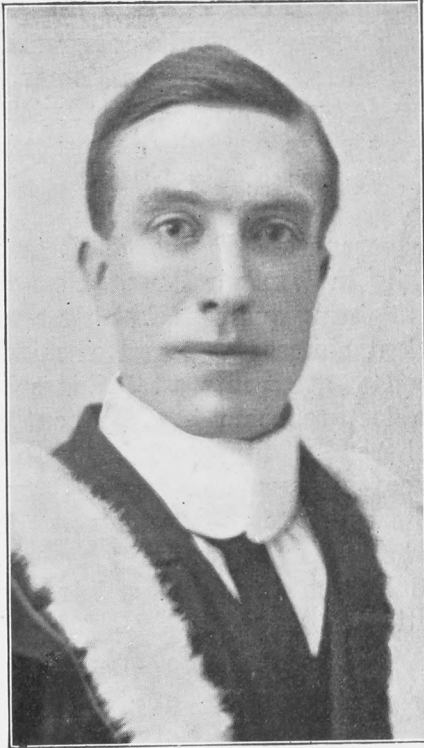

G. H.

JOHN JAMES RAE

"Jimmy" first saw the light in Manx land. How many years ago one hesitates to record. The outline of his life is soon told. After spending many years on both sides of the Atlantic, in the profession of horticulture (Jimmy is as much at home with flowers as with Greek verbs), he entered the Methodist ministry, and rendered faithful service on the Arcola District. Thence to Wesley, where his career has been marked with a steady industry and success. Reserved, never courting popularity, yet his character inspired confidence, and appreciation goes with acquaintance. We predict for him a ministry, rich in blessing and crowned with success.

Than robes riche.”

—Chaucer.

A lover of books and the thoughts of men, a searcher after causas rerum, a man unfooled by the shapes of things or their finery, a quiet worker; one whose gentle humor reveals an understanding heart, who employs no trumpeter, whose friendship is as loyal as the compass to the magnetic pole—there he is: Herbert Reynolds. At Wesley he has worked on committees innumerable, seeking not the limelight but only a place to do his bit conscientiously. As treasurer of the Dramatic Society and secretary of “Vox” staff, and as editor of the Religious Department, he has this year continued his consistent policy of service without grudging and without noise.

ERNEST ROBERTS

The great majority of the people we meet go out of our little worlds like “Ships that pass in the night”—we hail them and forget them. “Ernie” Roberts is not one of these. Born in Devonshire in the year A.D. —? he came, some years later, to Manitoba to follow a fortune in the furrow. In 1910 he unhitched his horses and left the “Sulky” which, according to common report, has never turned another sod.

During his Wesley years we have learned to appreciate him. His power of vision has inspired us—his big heart has captivated us—his music has thrilled us. We are glad to have met him.

J. M.

HAROLD G. SALTON

Everybody admires Harold's congenial personality, which forcibly betrays his early environment. He was born in Goderich, Ontario, and reared in a Methodist parsonage. In 1911, he was highly honoured by being an officer with the Canadian Boy Scouts at the coronation of George V. and the King's Rally in Windsor Park. He not only possesses fighting qualities, but has also shown a marked philosophic trend of mind which has been of great interest to his colleagues. The lecture room has frequently been atmospherically illuminated by his strong argument in search for truth. Having obeyed the call into the great work of the ministry, he will most certainly impress his audiences with his high ideals and lighten the people's burdens with his practical and sympathetic abilities.

W. S.

WALTER SANGUINE

There is only one "Walt" in Wesley, and perhaps of no other "Theolog" may it be as truly said that he has finished his course and kept the faith. He can claim the distinction of being a native of the greatest city of the greatest Empire of historic times, but "Walt" takes no pride in such a mere accident.

He left England for Canada in 1909, and after spending two years on a circuit has spent the remaining five in literary and theological studies at Wesley.

Earnest, painstaking and methodical, yet possessing a warm, sympathetic nature, "Walt" is certain of the sincerest welcome wherever devotion to duty and singleness of purpose is admired. Simple-hearted, cheerful and optimistic, he will carry sunshine wherever he goes.

THOMAS A. SIMPSON

T. A. is a virile Methodist from Yorkshire. He early had a desire to preach, beginning at 19 to practice on the long suffering dales-folk of his district. After successive periods at "Cliff" College, Newfoundland; Albert College and Saskatchewan, he came to Wesley in 1913, where his work has been marked by a faithfulness which is a good augury for his future success. Never given to much speaking in class he could, however, dissect a lecture as easily as he used to dissect the beeves years ago. A rotund, jovial, lovable fellow, with a laugh as healthful as the breezes of his beloved dales, he will be a credit to his country, church and Alma Mater.

W. L. P.

CLEMENT THOMAS WATTERSON

C. T. Watterson, like so many others in the graduating class, came from England in 1910, being introduced to the Canadian ministry by Dr. Woodworth. On Circuit in the Saskatchewan Conference, he has already proved himself a capable leader, and in the class room has revealed gifts that should make him a powerful influence in his future work.

His classmates, in recognition of his ability, elected him as their president this year, and as Tom passes out from amongst us it is with the hearty good wishes of his fellow students.

E. R.

THE THEOLOGS OF 1916

At the editor's request I am writing about the graduating class in Theology, and it is significant of the times that I write under canvas at Camp Hughes, where so many of Wesley's sons are in training for overseas service. The cool breeze which gratefully moderates the heat of this June day, bears to me the sound of a sergeant's strident voice, and I vaguely wonder if it can belong to Dave Morris, a member of this class, news of whose recent promotion came to him while attending the Moose Jaw Conference for ordination.

This sketch should really have been written by Tom Watterson, president of the class, but he's gone to the front with the Medical Corps—or else by the editor—but he, also, has left on active service. And, gentle reader, that's the whole trouble. This sketch cannot be like those of other years, because our class graduates in a war-year. This war has shaken the foundations of the world; it has re-cemented the bonds of the British Empire; and also, it has scattered to the four winds the members of Wesley's Theological Class of 1916.

E. C. Evans, whose death we mourned, and whose virtues were decently celebrated in a memorial service out West, writes from France to deny with indignation the premature news of his demise. With him are a group of others, just as much alive as he, who in normal times would this spring have received with us their diplomas. In the camps of Canada and of England, on the battlefields of Europe, as well as scattered on the fields of the West, are the men of our graduating class.

All the year long we felt and saw the effects of the far-away struggle. One by one the boys began to appear in class clad in the sacred khaki; and one by one their places were left vacant and we heard that they had gone to the far-flung battle-line. This disturbing influence turned us aside from the usual innocent delights incidental to one's final year at college. We held no class parties—but we were drawn more closely than ever before into the co-operate activities of the college.

Others will doubtless write of the special events of the year—of the coming of Dr. Crummy and the re-birth of the old Wesley spirit—which never really died, but which has splendidly renewed itself. Our class has participated in the renaissance and rejoices in the new day.

Not all of us have enlisted. Some are physically unfit; others have domestic ties to keep them at home; some are doing work of such delicacy and difficulty that they can hardly be spared; all are doing their share of the Empire's task. All have felt the weight and burden of the war; chastened in the presence of its colossal tragedies, faced with its vast problems, those left behind and those who shall return to resume their interrupted life-work will go out into a world widely different from that which has confronted any other graduating class in all the history of Wesley College.

EPILOGUE

It is only in justice to our subscribers that we wish to make a brief explanation. We sincerely regret the fact that the publication of this issue has been so materially delayed. Military duties principally have hindered the editorial work. Not only was our student body greatly depleted in numbers towards the end of the term, but what with the general exodus at the close of the college year and the departure of most of the members of the journal staff, it was with great difficulty that we assembled the material for this issue.

In these days, however, serenity of living is granted to no one. Hence we are sure that our readers will fully understand the belated appearance of this number, however novel it may seem.

We also wish to acknowledge our indebtedness to Mr. T. H. Nuttall and others on whom has fallen the work of preparing this issue for the press.

And one final word. In the interval that has elapsed since our last number was published, Wesley College has been adding to its traditions. The noblest page in its history has been written. The first of its sons have fallen in battle. And we desire that the present number of "Vox," if it does nothing more, should at least give expression to the spirit that now exists among Wesley students and alumni.

Looking forward to next year, and more particularly to the work of "Vox" that will be under the very capable direction of Mr. Nuttall, we can but hope that next session all those who are in attendance may fully realize the heritage of inspiration that is ours as a college. We, the graduating class and ex-students, look to you to "carry on."

It's Remarkable to Find Such Values in

Blue Serge Suits

The Eaton Clothing Section is featuring two of the best values in Serges ever offered in the Store's history:

Men's and Young Men's Single and Double Breasted Blue Serge Suits

$16.50

The serge is a soft, fine twill and excellent weight, fast Indigo dyed—tailoring superb in every detail—a dressy, moderate style. Manufacturers could not duplicate the suits today at $20.00.

Men's and Young Men's Single and Double Breasted Blue Serge Suits

$21.00

“EATON BRAND”—hand tailored. In a becoming, refined and well-fitting model that is as thoroughly tailor-made as the most exclusive and expensive custom shop work. And looks it! Cut from a beautifully fine twilled serge of fast Indigo blue dye; a material that could not be had in a custom-tailored suit, with comparable workmanship, under $35.00.

AND YET—

Blue Serges are so scarce today that hardly another store is giving them newspaper mention.

Manufacturers are advising their store customers to “hold Blue Serges” till next year, “when anything from 25 to 75 per cent. price advance will be fair.”

The supply of Blue Serges is as much as shut off—Indigo dyes being exhausted.

Plenty of Blue Serges at Eaton's

We planned far ahead—and Every Blue Serge Suit in the Men's Section is guaranteed fast Indigo dyed. We have no occasion to advance prices, either.
